

GLAMOUR, AMERICAN STYLE

CLASSIC COATS
PRETTY PASTELS
DIVINE DRESSES
BRIGHT LIPS
BOLD BROWS
PLUS
SHOWSTOPPING
HAIR

MEET
GENERATION W

55

SCENE
STEALERS
WHO'VE GOT THE LOOK

THE HUNGER GAMES STAR
LIKE YOU'VE NEVER SEEN HER BEFORE

JENNIFER LAWRENCE

POWER POP

WHAT W'S BEAUTY DIRECTOR, Jane Larkworthy, IS HOOKED ON THIS MONTH

Close to the Breast

Evelyn Lauder (that's us above in Aspen in 2002) was the nicest force of nature I ever reckoned with—part mother, part gossip, but mostly a tenacious philanthropist who nearly single-handedly brought national attention to breast cancer issues. She shall be sorely missed, though her imprimatur remains in the ubiquitous pink ribbons and plethora of items created to help the cause, like this chic Estée Lauder Pure Color Gloss (above right), which comes in a snakeskin-print pouch with a pink lipstick ($30, esteelauder.com).

Rose-Royce

Eau de Rolls-Royce? My friend Paul Austin, a fragrance consultant, introduced the automaker to the perfume company Robertet, which created the limited-edition Spirit of Ecstasy, a leathery take on the rose (see the making-of video at Wmagazine.com). At the launch was a who's who of the fragrance world, including my BFBs (fragrance boyfriends) Fabrice Penot (above, right, who slipped me Le Labo's first purse spray, $135, near right, above) and Byredo's Ben Gorham (above left, who spritzed me with his Black Saffron, $220, near right—a juniper-and-black-violet blend). Speaking of flowers, Oscar de la Renta tapped carnation and narcissus for his Essential Luxuries' Mi Corazón (right, center, $152); Bulgari's new Mon Jasmin Noir L'Elixir (far right, $102), meanwhile, mixes angelwing jasmine with honeyed amber. On that sweet note: Happy 20th birthday, Thierry Mugler's Angell

Going au Naturel

I recently edited my beauty cabinet (below) and went all minimal with Sprout Skincare. The ethically sourced ingredients sound like things I'd pick up at a health food store—coconut oil, almonds, sea salt, apple cider vinegar ($24–$32, sproutskincare.com). Better yet, they seem to work: The tiny bumps that were dotting my chin and forehead have vanished. Sprout can't take all the credit, though: Clarisonic's new cleansing device, the Aria ($199, clarisonic.com), has a "low" setting that's so gentle on my skin and feels so soothing, it's like a lulling pre-bedtime face massage.

Factory Swirls

For his Andy Warhol Collection for Nars Cosmetics, out next month, founder François Nars has created a host of colors inspired by the legendary Pop artist and his circle. The pièces de résistance are the Warhol Portrait palettes (left), with virtual prints of Warhol embedded in the makeup. "I think a lot of women are probably going to buy them and not touch them," Nars says. "Or they'll buy two!" ($55, narscosmetics.com)

Treatment Alert

TOP BRIT FACIALIST AMANDA LACEY IS AT NEW YORK'S LOWELL HOTEL FROM OCTOBER 29 THROUGH NOVEMBER 2. SIGN UP NOW! (AMANDALACEY.COM)

Rose-Royce

Eau de Rolls-Royce? My friend Paul Austin, a fragrance consultant, introduced the automaker to the perfume company Robertet, which created the limited-edition Spirit of Ecstasy, a leathery take on the rose (see the making-of video at Wmagazine.com). At the launch was a who's who of the fragrance world, including my FBFs (fragrance boyfriends) Fabrice Penot (above, right, who slipped me Le Labo's first purse spray, $135, near right, above) and Byredo's Ben Gorham (above left, who spritzed me with his Black Saffron, $220, near right—a juniper-and-black-violet blend). Speaking of flowers, Oscar de la Renta tapped carnation and narcissus for his Essential Luxuries' Mi Corazón (right, center, $152); Bulgari's new Mon Jasmin Noir L'Elixir (far right, $102), meanwhile, mixes angelwing jasmine with honeyed amber. On that sweet note: Happy 20th birthday, Thierry Mugler's Angel!